TRUMP TO MEET FBI DIRECTOR CANDIDATES

President Donald Trump on Wednesday will interview four candidates for the position of director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, White House spokesman Sean Spicer told reporters. Spicer, who was aboard Air Force One with Trump, said the president would meet with acting FBI Director Andrew McCabe, former Oklahoma Governor Frank Keating, former Connecticut Senator Joe Lieberman and former senior FBI official Richard McFeely. The position was left vacant after Trump fired James Comey.

ISIS MINING MOSUL TO STOP FLEEING FAMILIES

Islamic State militants are planting bombs near front doors in Mosul to prevent civilians leaving, as Iraqi forces make their final push against the jihadists after months of fighting. Trapped in a shrinking area of the city, the militants are using the several hundred thousand civilians under their control as human shields to avoid being targeted or perhaps tarnish what Iraqi leaders describe as imminent victory.

Backed by a U.S.-led coalition, Iraqi forces have made gains since opening a new front in northwest Mosul this month and have now dislodged Islamic State from all but about 5 square miles of the city. The militants still control the Old City, where they are expected to make their last stand in the densely populated, narrow streets that are impassable for armored vehicles, forcing Iraqi forces to advance on foot. REUTERS

PUTIN OFFERS TRANSCRIPT OF MEETING

Vladimir Putin said on Wednesday that U.S. President Donald Trump had not divulged any secrets during a meeting in Washington with Russian officials and offered to prove it by supplying Congress with a transcript. But a leading U.S. Republican politician said he would have little faith in any notes Putin might supply. Two U.S. officials said on Monday Trump had disclosed classified information about a planned Islamic State operation to Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov when they met last week, plunging the White House into a fresh controversy just four months into Trump's tenure. Trump has defended his decision to discuss intelligence with the Russians. REUTERS

5 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

GOOGLE CHALLENGES APPLE'S SIRI

5 Alphabet Inc's Google said on Wednesday it would make its digital assistant available on Apple Inc's iPhone, making a play for the higher end of the smartphone market and challenging Apple's Siri feature on its own devices. The announcement heralds a step by Google, whose Android system runs on the majority of the world's smartphones, to get a foothold on Apple's phones, which have smaller market share but are used by people who tend to spend more on technology. It comes as Google, Apple and Amazon.com Inc are competing to establish the dominant voice-powered digital assistant, which many in the industry believe will supplant keyboards and touch screens as a primary way that users interact with technology.

Harvard Black Commencement is a chance to celebrate students' families, organizers say

Student organizers helped put together Harvard's first university-wide grad school Black Commencement, to take place May 23.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Kristin Turner knows that her graduation from Harvard University will be an exciting moment not just for her, but for her entire family — and they'll get the chance to see her cross the stage twice.

Two days before the school's official commencement, Turner will participate in Harvard's first university-wide Black Commencement for graduate students.

Turner, a Harvard Law School student and president of the Harvard Black Law Students Association, helped organize the event, called Black Commencement 2017.

"It's an opportunity to create space for typically underrepresented students who have definitely achieved so many things," she said. "It's an opportunity to celebrate ourselves while paying homage to the village that contributed to our success."

The event on May 23 may even be more emotional and meaningful than Harvard's 366th Commencement on May 25, she said, because it's an event for her family.

"For the older members of our family, there's this idea of having a lineage that connects themselves to slaves, but also having descendants now coming out of Harvard," she said. "That's more meaningful than we really grasp in words."

The event will start with a spoken-word performance and will feature student keynotes, two Harvard Black Legacy Awards and a stoning ceremony, where students will cross the stage, shake hands with their school's dean and don a stole made of African kente cloth.

"The African kente cloth is meant to be a physical representation of our shared heritage, shared victories and of our community we're hoping to build as black Harvard professionals and black Harvard alumni," said Courtney Woods, another organizer and one of the keynote speakers.

"The cloth is a way to honor those who couldn't be here with us but made us being here possible," she added.

Though this event is a first for Harvard grad schools, it's not a new concept. Harvard College has had a Black Commencement in the past, and black ceremonies have been held at Stanford University, University of Washington and more.

Still, as news of the ceremony has spread, there's been some backlash. Comments on articles asked, "What if white students did this?" A Washington Times editorial called it a "racially segregated" ceremony.

But organizers assure it's not meant to be separatist.

"It was never created to be exclusionary," Turner said. "If anything, it was created to fill a gap that we saw and to be as inclusive as possible."

In an interview with Dr. Phil, Shayanna Jenkins-Hernandez said that Hernandez told her that rumors that he was gay were not true. YOUTUBE/THE DR. PHIL SHOW

Aaron Hernandez denied gay rumors, fiancée claims

Shayanna Jenkins-Hernandez also said that there was no note addressed to Hernandez's rumored prison lover, Kyle Kennedy.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

Aaron Hernandez did not leave a suicide note for his rumored prison lover, the former NFL star's fiancée said in an interview with Dr. Phil McGraw on Tuesday, and she also denied rumors that he was gay.

Shayanna Jenkins-Hernandez spoke about the rumors on the "Dr. Phil" show on Tuesday. She said that Hernandez told her that he wasn't gay.

"I don't know where this came from," she said. "It's embarrassing in a sense. It's hurtful, regardless of if it's true or not."

Dr. Phil asked her if she brought up the rumors about his sexuality with Hernandez in passing or if she confronted him about being gay.

"You never approach any situation by accusing," she said. "So I asked, he told me [that it wasn't true] and that was it."

After it was reported that Hernandez had an affair with fellow prisoner, 22-year-old Kyle Kennedy, a lawyer for Kennedy said that the inmate believed one of the multiple suicide notes found in Hernandez's cell was addressed to him.

"My client believes one of the letters was written to him," Kennedy's lawyer, Larry Army Jr., said during a news conference in April. "This is coming from his own knowledge of the relationship that he and Hernandez shared and from someone on the inside who indicated that the letter was for him."

Army declined to name the "person on the inside." In her interview with Dr. Phil, Jenkins-Hernandez said that no note was left for Kennedy.

"According to Kennedy's lawyer, Aaron reportedly wrote Kyle a note. Is that true?" Dr. Phil asked.

"A suicide note, in a sense?" Jenkins-Hernandez responded. "No, that's not accurate. ... There's nothing for Kyle Kennedy."

Jenkins-Hernandez said that there were notes left for her, her and Hernandez's daughter and Hernandez's lawyers. She said that Hernandez had never mentioned Kennedy and she never heard of him at all before those reports.

In a statement released Tuesday evening via his lawyer, Kennedy said that he wanted to "be clear that at no time have I seen

"It's embarrassing in a sense. It's hurtful, regardless of if it's true or not."

a note addressed to me from my close friend Aaron Hernandez, but I have reason to believe it was in fact intended for me."

Kennedy acknowledged that the story about who the letter was sent to "has changed several times" but reiterated that he believes "it is highly likely that it was in fact intended for me."

Hernandez, 27, was found hanged in his cell at the Souza-Baranowski Correctional Center in Shirley, Massachusetts, on April 19. His death was ruled a suicide by authorities, but in an earlier segment from her two-part interview with Dr. Phil, Jenkins-Hernandez said that she did not believe he killed himself.

Boston is expected to need 53,000 more units of housing by 2030. WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

Latest draft of 'Imagine Boston 2030' puts emphasis on affordable housing

The city aims to combat displacement, expand housing opportunities and prepare to welcome thousands of residents as the population continues to grow.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

By 2030, Boston will need at least 53,000 more housing units than it currently has in order to keep up with its growing population, city officials project. By 2050, another 42,000 on top of that.

Where will these homes fit into Boston's 49 square miles? That's one question that the city's "Imagine Boston 2030" plan aims to answer.

The city released on Thursday the second iteration of the "Imagine Boston 2030" draft plan, which was crafted with the help of more than 14,000 residents who added their voices to topics such as affordable housing, climate change and technology.

This is Boston's first citywide plan in 50 years, so it addresses multiple issues. At the core, it seems, is the growth that the city will see and what that means the Boston of the future will look like.

"This new draft of 'Imagine Boston 2030' takes a careful and proactive approach to making sure that all Bostonians benefit from the historic growth that is happening in our city," Mayor Marty Walsh said in a statement. "As we continue to make investments to expand access to opportunity, we also want to make sure that people can afford to stay in neighborhoods [where] they live — in the neighborhoods they helped build."

Enhance Existing Neighborhoods

Current neighborhoods could get a revamp under this draft plan with investments in open spaces and arts as well as amenities like healthy food options and drug stores. The plan also aims to create newly developed housing that is responsible to area incomes and put in place proactive anti-displacement policies. The plan points to Upham's Corner as an example of this kind of enhancement.

Encourage a Mixed-Use Core

"Imagine Boston 2030" wants to make the core of the city more vibrant and open to additional uses on nights and weekends rather than being all industry and commerce. That means areas like Downtown and Longwood would see job growth as well as new housing so residents can be close to their jobs, the city said.

Expand Neighborhoods

The "edges" of existing neighborhoods need more love, the city says, in order to "stitch together the physical fabric of the city." This would help alleviate housing pressure affecting the existing neighborhoods, the plan notes. The city also aims to develop more job opportunities in these overlooked areas by developing offices and industrial spaces to accommodate residents. Building up the transportation options will make these areas more easily accessible, also.

Six areas are highlighted as "expanded neighborhoods" in which the city is guiding growth: Sullivan Square, Newmarket and Widett Circle, Fort Point Channel, Suffolk Downs, Readville, and Beacon Yards.

Clients enjoying ManiCare services. PROVIDED

Dr. Feelgood: How one woman's hospital experience led to mobile nail-care business

Entrepreneur behind ManiCare brings a salon to women who can't get to one by themselves.

AD AMOROSI

Kate Arian isn't just a woman who does nails.

Her company, ManiCare, does give manicures and pedicures to the hospitalized and homebound, but the New Jersey native and former marketing executive for L'Oreal found a circuitous route to nail-care entrepreneurialism.

After graduating from the University of Pennsylvania in 2011, her cystic fibrosis (CF) required a double lung transplant, with a long recovery afterward. While hospitalized, she found that care for women beyond the medical – feeling beautiful, tending to one's daily regimen – went out the window. With that need in mind, she started ManiCare in 2015 and never looked back. Based in Manhattan, the traveling salon now offers its services in Philly, Boston, across the East Coast and in Cleveland and Chicago.

Q: How long after your surgeries did you stew before starting ManiCare?

A: I had the idea for ManiCare while recovering from surgery, but I did actually go on to hold two corporate jobs before becoming the full-time founder and CEO. I had the ManiCare website up, though, within a month of returning home in post-transplant mode in 2011.

Q: Are you used to pampering yourself, and what did not having those amenities in the hospital do to your spirit?

A: [Laughs] I have a "fancy disposition" my mom says. I have always relished a nice outfit, jewelry and beauty treatments. Feeling and looking your personal best is a very empowering and motivating thing. It can restore dignity and humanity. Sometimes, unfortunately, it's all you can do for someone who is very ill.

Q: You give a portion of your proceeds to various charities. Have you ever been attached to any charitable endeavor before this?

A: My parents run a charity to help patients with CF and their families afford medical care not covered by insurance and/or lifestyle costs associated with their medical burdens. I was taught from a young age about giving back – both from my family and at my Jewish day school – and throughout all of my own challenges, I was always aware that there were those less fortunate.

Q: What is the age range of those who use your services?

A: Our younger demographic is the new and expecting mothers who like our services while on bed rest or in the hospital after birth – 35 to 55 is probably the most common age range. We also have many elderly users – the oldest recurring clients are 97 and 100.

Q: What is your personal motto when it comes to all this?

A: Face life with a little guts and a lot of glitter ... and when "I" is replaced by "we," even "illness" becomes "wellness."

US immigration arrests up nearly 40 percent under Trump

That increase is a result of recent guidance given by Homeland Security Secretary John Kelly to implement Trump's executive orders on interior immigration enforcement and border security signed on Jan. 25, just days after the Republican president took office.

REUTERS

U.S. arrests of suspected illegal immigrants rose by nearly 40 percent in the first 100 days of Donald Trump's presidency, following executive orders that broadened the scope of who could be targeted for immigration violations, according to government data released on Wednesday.

The acting director of Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) Thomas Homan said that arrests by his agency jumped to 41,318 between January 22 of this year and the end of April, up from 30,028 arrests in roughly the same period last year.

Of those arrested almost two-thirds had criminal convictions. But there was also a significant jump - of more than 150 percent - in the number of immigrants not convicted of further crimes arrested by ICE: 10,800 since the beginning of the year compared to 4,200 non-criminal arrests in the same period in 2016.

"Those that enter the country illegally, they do violate the law, that is a criminal act," Homan said on the call, while emphasizing that immigrants who pose a threat to national security or have criminal records are still a priority for the agency.

He said ICE will continue to target people who have been issued a final order of removal by an immigration judge even if they have not committed another crime.

"When a federal judge makes a decision and issues an order that order needs to mean something," Homan said. "If we don't take action on those orders, then we are just spinning our wheels."

While President

Barack Obama was also criticized for deporting a large number of immigrants, most of them were recent border crossers apprehended entering the country illegally.

Deportations under Trump have actually fallen by 12 percent compared to the same period under Obama, Homan said, as more people arrested in the interior typically have more complicated cases that can get slowed down in the backlogged immigration court system.

RALLYING THE REPUBLICANS

When Democrats talk to Republicans here in D.C., they rarely use gentle tones. The bitter feud between the two major parties was made no better by the vicious 2016 election and the Democrats' electoral collapse. Accordingly, ever since Inauguration Day, Dems have flung relentless curses at their political opponents — even if decorum has kept most of the profanity muted.

But now from Capitol Hill to K Street, an unexpectedly gentler call is echoing. It is faint, but day by day more congressional Democrats are pleading with any Republicans who will listen: Help us.

Help with what, you say? The Dems want help getting a net around the Trump administration and this whole nasty mess about the Russians meddling in the election. They want GOPers to join their campaign for an independent counsel to oversee the FBI investigation. They want their colleagues across the aisle to let the president know he will effectively be a man without a party if he does not cooperate with the probe. In short, in political terms, they want the moon and the stars.

And they might — just might — get it.

With each new revelation (and denial by Team Trump) you can feel the tremors rattling through Republicanland. Sure, they enjoy holding the House of Representatives, the Senate and the White House, and they know that gives their party immense power. But they also know the punishment from voters could be extremely damaging if they are perceived to be helping cover up some screwy cloak-and-dagger scheme.

Mind you, I said, "perceived." We have no proof yet that the Trump group, writ large, did anything wrong. But the drumbeat for a fair, open and thorough investigation is getting louder and could soon be deafening — drowning out all attempts by the president or his party to talk about anything else. And let's face it, President Trump has not exactly charmed his own party's rank and file.

Given those circumstances, yeah — some Republicans are showing some inclination to listen to the Democratic pleas. And if enough do, this storm may not easily pass the White House — but could rage and rage.

Democrats try to force vote on independent Russia probe

Democrats have been pushing for a special prosecutor or independent investigation of possible tampering in the 2016 election and links between Trump's associates and Moscow as the Republican campaigned for president.

REUTERS

Democratic lawmakers said Wednesday they would try to force a vote in the House of Representatives on forming an independent commission to investigate possible Russian influence on the 2016 election, saying Republicans could not be trusted to thoroughly investigate President Donald Trump.

Reps. Elijah Cummings of Maryland and Eric Swalwell of California introduced a bill in December 2016 and again in January 2017 seeking to establish a 12-member, bipartisan-appointed independent commission to investigate the matters.

Russia has denied that it sought to meddle in the U.S. vote, and Trump has pushed back against such assertions.

ers of the House have not allowed the legislation to move forward, forcing Democrats to use a parliamentary procedure known as a "discharge petition" aimed at forcing a vote on legislation that would create the commission.

"Speaker [Paul] Ryan has shown he has zero, zero, zero appetite for any investigation of President Trump," Cummings told a news conference. He accused the White House of obstructing congressional investigations and refusing to provide documents.

So far, Reps. Walter Jones and Justin Amash are the only two Republicans in the House to support the petition, which would not succeed unless 23 members of their party join all 193 Democrats in signing it.

Democrats have used discharge petitions successfully only twice in recent years, most recently for a vote to preserve the export-import bank in 2015.

All you need is sunscreen and your

MEGAN JOHNSON

Just because you're without a car doesn't mean you have to be stuck jumping through sprinklers with the neighborhood kids to cool off this summer. There are plenty of awesome beaches in the Boston area that are reachable with nothing but your good old CharlieCard. Here's a roundup of some of our favorites.

Revere Beach

Pizza, soft serve and sunshine: Revere Beach is that classic stuff that summer dreams are made of.
MBTA Blue Line to Revere Beach

Constitution Beach

Score some sun with Eastie's finest at Constitution, where you can catch some rays as the planes fly into Logan Airport. The beach earns bonus points for the great playground for kids, as well as a Dunkin' Donuts right by the entrance.

Try the habanero-watermelon slushy at Blackstrap BBQ.

MBTA Blue Line to Orient Heights

Singing Beach

Manchester-by-the-Sea doesn't just have to be for Casey Affleck. Before you hop back on the train, check out Chef Matthew Gaudet's Superfine, just a short walk from the station.

MBTA Commuter Rail's Rockport branch of the Newburyport/Rockport line to Manchester-by-the-Sea, beach is about a half-mile walk from the station

King's Beach

Straddling the line between Lynn and Swampscott, King's Beach is a peaceful oasis ideal for a quiet day at the beach. If you want to get fancy, head to Mission on the Bay for postbeach eats, or swing by Lincoln's Landing for prebeach pancakes.

442 bus from Haymarket to Humphrey Street in Swampscott

Yirrell Beach

This Winthrop spot is clean, has great spots for playing volleyball and doesn't attract as much riffraff as other local beaches. If you're looking to refuel after all that sun, head to local favorite Blackstrap BBQ for buffalo wings and a habanero-watermelon slushy.

MBTA Blue Line to Orient Heights, bike or grab a short cab ride to the beach

Wollaston Beach

Stretching 2.5 miles

on the Boston Harbor, Wollaston Beach is the place to be if you're hungry for classic New England seafood shacks like Tony's Clam Shop and the Clam Box.
MBTA Red Line to North

Quincy or Wollaston

Carson Beach

It's easy to get to, and embodies the idea of summer in Boston. Carson Beach is the more family friendly option of the Southie beaches. Plus, there's restrooms! MBTA Red Line to JFK/UMass

M Street Beach

To say M Street Beach is a scene in the summer would be a massive understatement. Bikini-clad ladies and guys with coconut-oiled chests rule M Street, so if you're looking to make "friends," this is the spot. MBTA Red Line to Broadway, then No. 9 bus to East Broadway at L Street

Spectacle Island

Just a 20-minute ferry ride from the mainland, it feels like a million miles away from the city. During the summer, they've got lifeguards on duty, as well as bathrooms, rinsing showers and changing areas. It's also ideal for hiking and boating, but FYI, the marina is closed until the end of July this year. MBTA Blue Line to

Aquarium, hop on the Harbor Ferry

Nantasket Beach

One of the Bay State's most popular beaches, Nantasket is a little farther away, but still reachable. Check out the brand new Local 02045, where you can watch the sunset as you eat dinner on one of the two patios. MBTA Red Line to Quincy Center, 220 Bus to Hingham Depot/Station Street, then 714 bus to Pemberton Point, Hull

Newport

If you're willing to put in a little extra travel, you can easily make your way to Newport. The epicenter of the Rhode Island boating and yachting scene, Newport has beautiful beaches, great shopping and a fun downtown area with bars and restaurants. MBTA Commuter rail to Providence, then Seastreak Ferry through Narragansett Bay Relax with a drink from Local 02045 at Nantasket Beach.

New England cuisine is at its best when the warm weather finally hits. From the region's second to none seafood to its iconic cold beverages, there's something to satisfy every local. Here are five quintessential New England treats you have to try this summer.

1 Del's Frozen Lemonade

Take a bite out of the summer heat with this Ocean State favorite. Del's Frozen Lemonade officially launched in 1948 as a quaint stand in Cranston, and now boasts dozens of shops located around Rhode Island and Massachusetts. For those looking for an extra kick, Del's partnered with Naragansett to create two styles of shandy, mixing their iconic lemonade with Gansett's lager for a perfect warm weather boozy beverage. Various locations, Rhode Island and Mass., dels.com

2 Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream

The Vermont-based ice cream company is beloved by not just New England, but the entire country. Whether you're grabbing a pint of Chocolate Cherry Garcia from the grocery store or scooping up a cone from any of their shops located across the nation, indulging in Ben & Jerry's is never a bad time. Looking for a road trip? Take the kids to Waterbury this summer for a tour of the brand's factory. Various locations, benjerry.com

3 Lobster rolls

Lobster rolls are synonymous with summer in New England, and everybody has their own take on this iconic dish. Whether it's warmed up and drenched in butter or cold and lathered in mayo, you can't go wrong with this crustacean-filled sandwich. If you don't mind waiting in line, head to Revere Beach and try the lobster roll at Kelly's Roast Beef, a mouthwatering combination of diced celery, mayo and a ton of lobster meat. Kelly's Roast Beef, 410 Revere Beach Blvd., Revere, kellysroastbeef.com

4 Frappes

A New England phenomenon, frappes are not to be confused with milkshakes, even though they're pretty much the same thing anywhere else you go in the country. In these parts, though, a frappe is a blend of ice cream, milk and sometimes flavoring. The local version of a milkshake is similar, just without ice cream. Got it? Good. Try the fan-favorite vanilla frappe at Lizzy's. New England is weird.

Lizzy's, 29 Church St., Cambridge, or 367 Moody St., Waltham, lizzysicecream.com

5 Fenway Franks

A summertime trip to the home of the Red Sox isn't complete until you've gotten a Fenway Frank. The beloved Boston dish beat out every other ballpark's menu during this year's MLB Hot Dog Madness challenge by the National Hot Dog & Sausage Council. It's not hard to see why. What could be better than a steamed Kayem beef frank topped with relish, spicy brown mustard and onions on a New England-style, top-split bun?

Where to drink and eat al fresco this summer.

SARAH SWEENEY

Boston does its best work in the summer. The students are gone, the train cars are less crowded, and the weather works its magic on both wardrobes and attitudes. Everybody wants to be outside, of course, maximizing those precious few days of freedom until the cold inevitably returns. But until then, there are roof-decks to relax on, patios to people-watch, plus plenty of food and drink to go round. Here are some of the best spots to get your al fresco on around town.

Felipe's

A few years ago, this Harvard Square taqueria moved spaces and debuted its glorious new rooftop bar and lounge, the perfect place to double fist a burrito and margarita, all while watching a scenic Cambridge sunset. Just make sure to get there before 5 p.m., when the working crowd descends in droves to blow off some steam and munch on Mexican fare. 21 Brattle St., Cambridge, harvardsqfelipestaqueria.com

Grab your friends and hang outside at Ocean Prime.

Coppersmith

Skip the outdoor patio and head right to the Air-deck, this Southie restaurant's rooftop featuring a vintage Airstream trailer refashioned into a craft beer and cocktail bar. Grab a savory pimienta cheese sandwich and the Sweet Tease cocktail with sweet tea vodka, peach liqueur, lemon ginger, simple syrup and soda water ($12). 40 W 3rd St., South Boston, coppersmithboston.com fruity creations like white peach and watermelon salad ($12) as well as classic New England favorites, like the lobster roll, made with a shallot aioli on a buttery brioche roll ($25). Did we mention there's a pool? It's like you're in L.A. but right in the heart of the Back Bay. 200 Stuart St., Boston, reverehotel.com

Ocean Prime

If mingling with the in-crowd is your thing, you'll want to hit Ocean Prime's patio, which debuts at the popular seafood and steak house on June 1. A regular hotspot for Boston's top athletes, the Seaport restaurant features live music, plenty of prime cut steaks and fresh fare from the sea, as well as one of Boston's most Instagrammable cocktails, Berries & Bubbles, a vaporous dry ice drink with Belvedere citrus vodka, marinated berries, house-made sour, and Domaine Chandon Brut ($16). 140 Seaport Blvd., Boston, ocean-prime.com make [the experience] as natural as possible," he says. He recommends going to your farmer's market and seeing what's available. If you have a garden, there's your inspiration right there. "Whatever I'm growing at the time — chilis, breakfast radishes — that's what I'm using," he says. "Lettuce greens coming up? Stay simple in the summertime. We have four months of it to be really nice out."

Ditch the foil — veggies should go right on the grill, or even directly on the fire. He recommends torching a tomato or red pepper until it's fully charred, and then peeling that layer off. "Something magical happens when something gets really caramelized and charcoal on the outside," he says.

Grilling with gas may be easier, but Talde says the difference between that and charcoal is night and day.

He fills his grill with hard wood charcoal. "There's nothing like cooking over wood that gets people's mouth watering," he says.

"The biggest mistake is too low temperatures," he says. "Either not enough charcoal or fire power, and you don't get those great grill marks you're looking for."

Talde believes anything can go on the grill, and will taste good if you do it right. "It's like the classic kitchen test: What happens when you fry it?" he says. "I don't know, just throw it on."

When it comes to veggies, Talde says you should go with what's fresh and seasonal.

These Boston events won't cost you a penny. MATTHEW DINARO

It's summer and the kids are restless — what to do with them? Ah, the eternal question, that is until you can finally send them to college. Well, for at least the summer months, these area attractions have got you covered without breaking the bank.

Free Fun Fridays

Every Friday from the end of June through the end of August, a different set of Massachusetts cultural institutions, mostly museums, will open their doors to the public for free, sponsored by the Highland Street Foundation.

Boston icons like the Museum of Fine Arts, the Boston Children's Museum, the JFK Library, the Franklin Park Zoo and the U.S.S.

Constitution Museum will participate, but Free Fun Fridays isn't limited to the Boston area. Western and Central Mass. institutions like the Eco-Tarium, the Eric Carle Museum, Tanglewood, Old Sturbridge Village, Mass MoCA and Jacob's Pillow Dance are also on the roster, as well as institutions on the North and South Shores, like the Peabody Essex Museum, Maritime Gloucester and Plimoth Plantation. On the Cape and Islands, you can visit the Nantucket Whaling Museum, the Cape Cod Children's Museum, the Provincetown Art Association and Museum, and for the kids, the Edward Gorey House.

So, wherever you live in our fair state, there's something free close by. June 23-Aug. 23, various locations, highlandstreet.org

Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular

This Independence Day concert on the Esplanade is a long-running Boston tradition, drawing thousands from around the metro area or even farther afield, and many arriving early to grab a coveted spot on the lawn. There's also an event space on the Cambridge side of the river where you'll be able to hear the concert and see the fireworks just fine.

Harborwalk Sounds

This annual summer showcase, curated by the world-renowned Berklee College of Music, takes perfect advantage of the Institute of Contemporary Art's very nice back porch. Each Thursday in July and August, you'll get a different performance — this year's line-up includes R&B, soul, pop and much more, from some of Berklee's best and brightest, such as Latin pop artist Lizje. July 6-Aug. 31, Institute of Contemporary Art, 25 Harbor Shore Drive, Boston, icaboston.org

Cinema Somerville Outdoor Movie Series

Those bored by typical outdoor summer movie fare ("Monsters, Inc." again?) should peep this one, taking place each Thursday in July, and aiming for a refreshingly random, decidedly old school set of offerings, with 1946's "Sherlock Holmes: Dressed to Kill", 1960's "The Little Shop of Horrors", 1954's "The Last Time I Saw Paris" and 1941's "The Ghost Train." July 6-27, The Growing Center, 22 Vinal Ave., Somerville, scatsomerville.com

"Romeo and Juliet"

Commonwealth Shakespeare's popular Shakespeare on the Common series returns with one of the Bard's most famous plays, the one you had to read in high school, barely understanding what anyone was saying and yet crying anyway. Shakespeare's depiction of young love, in all its idealism and recklessness, just seems to strike a timeless chord.

Bill Burr isn't sure how to roast Big Papi

The comic talks roasting David Ortiz, Gronk and the ugly side of sports. MATT JUUL

Bill Burr doesn't have a game plan for the "Roast of David Ortiz." PROVIDED

As a diehard Boston sports fan, comedian Bill Burr is having a pretty tough time coming up with jokes about hometown heroes like Big Papi and Rob Gronkowski, who'll share the dais at the "Roast of David Ortiz" on June 22.

Although the 48-year-old Canton native isn't sure how he'll poke fun at the Boston slugger and his famous pals, he has no trouble taking aim at the racist Red Sox fans who're giving locals a bad rap. Let's just say the always-irreverent comic has a few choice words for these shameless attendees.

Ahead, Burr breaks down his lack of a game plan for the upcoming roast, his favorite Big Papi moments and his thoughts on the recent controversies at Fenway.

Are you excited or intimidated to roast Big

Papi?

Neither, I'm confused. I'm not intimidated. I don't have to fight the guy. Everyone on the dais has won championships. They all have rings. I don't have a problem with any of them, so I'm really trying to figure out what there is to roast.

You don't typically do roasts. Is this a comedy format you enjoy?

I only do it when it's a good friend of mine. This is like an exception because the Red Sox have done stuff for me, and I've done benefits and stuff like that. They wanted me on this thing, so obviously I'm going to do it. But human-being-to-human-being, I've got nothing against this guy. We've never hung out, so it's going to be a little challenging.

What's your favorite Big

Local Real Estate Agent Guarantees to Sell Your Boston Area Home or Buy it for Cash

Boston - Every month, thousands of homeowners are faced with the stressful dilemma of whether to buy first or sell first. You see, if you buy before selling, you could run the risk of owning two homes. Or, just as bad, if you sell first, you could end up homeless. It's what insiders in the industry call the Real Estate Catch 22, and it's an extremely anxious position to find yourself in.

This financial and emotional tightrope is one you usually have to walk alone because most agents have no way of helping you with this predicament. But one local realtor is using a unique Guaranteed Sale Program which solves this dilemma. This program guarantees the sale of your present home before you take possession of your new one. If your home doesn't sell in 120 days, they will buy it from you themselves for the previously agreed price ensuring that you never get caught in the Real Estate Catch

22. Before you hire any professional, you should research the market to find out who can do the best job for you. When interviewing agents, find out what kind of guarantee they are willing to give you with respect to the selling of your home. Unfortunately, you'll find that most agents simply cannot make such a guarantee.

To help you learn more about this program and how it can make your move less stressful, a FREE special report has been prepared entitled "How to Avoid Getting Stuck with Two Homes".

To hear a brief recorded message about how to order your FREE copy of this report call toll-free 1-800-597-1519 and enter 1022. You can call any time, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Papi moment?

Every at-bat that he had against the Yankees. Nobody ever earned the nickname the "Yankee Killer" my entire time watching the Red Sox until he came along. I was living in New York at the time, and just to watch Yankee fans at sports bars, watching their shoulders slump when he came to the plate, the way we used to when anyone of their great players would step up there. I was in New York City when we lost in '99. I was there when we lost in '03. And I was there when we were down 0-3 in 2004. I remember this New York City cop laughing at me because of my hat. I couldn't wait to run into him again, but I never saw him again. That still kills me.

What about Gronk?

All of them are the same. They step up in big moments and win championships. I think Gronk plays up that whole Gronk thing. You can't be a moron and memorize a playbook. You just can't. I think a lot of people would like to think that because it makes them feel better about themselves. It's like Jessica Simpson. Everyone's like, "Oh my God, she's so dumb." It's like really? She has a hit record and her own TV show. People can only bring you along so far. I just think he's a fun guy.

If you go

As a lifelong Boston sports fan, were you sad to see the recent controversies out of Fenway? I don't understand how someone still thinks that way, and I don't understand how someone does that and nobody's saying anything. It's 2017. That's pretty pathetic. That was an embarrassment. It's such a cowardly thing to do. But people, they don't feel any shame.

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS

The upcoming season of Tina Fey's hit "Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt" (back this Friday) will take on Kimmy's matriculation to college, Titus' reflection on his career and romances and — hold up, Lillian is running for office?

We spoke to Carol Kane, who plays kooky free spirit Lillian, about how the brilliantly funny series balances an upbeat outlook with serious issues, and what's in store for our favorite stoop crone.

I really love Lillian because she is so strange but really endearing. What is it that attracts you to these kooky characters?

A big thing about Lillian is her passion, what she believes in she'll just go to the ground for. She'll do anything. And also her lack of being able to edit herself [laughs]. Whatever she thinks comes out her mouth. She's very brave. She doesn't really care what anybody thinks of what she says or does. I admire that about her. I'm much more self-conscious about what I say or do than Lillian.

The gentrification story line last season was subtle but powerful. And the show does a really good job of balancing ing being funny with bringing awareness around an issue. And that is going to get enhanced this year, because at the end of last season someone came to [Lillian's] door and said, "If it really means that much to you,

In the third season of "Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt," Carol Kane's Lillian gets political. NETFLIX

why don't you run for office?" And I'm taking that on. I do run for office, so my fight against gentrification becomes more official and louder. I also meet a special someone through that fight. I meet a sort of archenemy who becomes a beloved person in my life.

The show never reveals what part of New York it's taking place in exactly. But you film in Brooklyn right?

We film in Brooklyn and I think that gentrification is huge in the city. When I was young and growing up in the city, every neighborhood was so specific and had its little community that was very well defined, and now you get on the subway at 72nd on the West Side and you go all the way down to SoHo and you get off the subway and you see the exact same bank and the exact same store as when you got on the subway. Used to be you got off and you were in Wonderland. It was all very different and specific, and I really miss that.

There's a lot of positivity that's depicted. The show features a much more hopeful New York than the one that exists in this current political climate. It's hard to have a lot of hope right now. But you know, people are fighting. People are fighting for their rights and always will be. Each individual voice is critical, especially now. And I do think that Lillian demonstrates that and Kimmy and Titus and even [Jacqueline] are having a whole new life since she broke up with her rich guy. She's on her own and making something of her life, against great odds. Everyone in the show is sort of hopeful against great odds. And they're all fighters.

Season 3 of "Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt" premieres on May 19 on Netflix.

Many articles have been written about the gay sex scene in the third episode of "American Gods." I just wanted to add my two cents.

My two cents, by the way, are coming from a straight white woman and should be taken in that context. My horse in this race is connected to the way women vs. men are portrayed in sex scenes. I'll leave it to those who in the LGBTQ and Middle Eastern communities to make the incredibly important points about how this scene, between characters Salim (Omid Abtahi) and the Jinn (Mousa Kraish), affects them. All I can add with any authority is the angle that affects me: equal opportunity nudity.

Showrunner Bryan Fuller spoke how Starz required equal opportunity nudity in shows like "Spartacus," and "Power." One wouldn't think this should be a radical thing, but with the way sex has been portrayed throughout the history of television (and film and video games, etc.), it is.

If you ever wanted evidence that most entertainment is focused on the straight-male gaze, just consider any series that shows nudity. "Game of Thrones"? When it has male nudity, it's usually to show that part of the body suffering some sort of harm. Then look again at how so many scenes feature naked women just as background decoration. Nudity is fine, in my book; the way it's focused almost exclusively on pleasing straight men is not.

Go ahead and put your favorite films or TV shows to this test. Whose nudity did you see? I'm not talking about butts here. Whose actual naughty bits were put on display? How often is it the woman completely naked but not the man?

We're told, as women, that our bodies are objects and the straight-male gaze is far more important than our own. We're told we aren't supposed to want to see these things, but it's fine when guys do and we're here to please them. That Starz has taken the step to acknowledge that straight white men are not the only people who appreciate sexuality and want to see their own represented is encouraging.

Touch the sky in Pittsburgh

The theme of summer 2017 in the City of Champions is high-flying fun.

ED CONDRAN

With apologies to Boston, Pittsburgh was the first City of Champions. Pennsylvania's rising city has been reaching for sporting glory since the Civil War, and was the site of the first-ever football game in 1892.

Sitting at the intersection of three rivers also means Pittsburgh has tons of water-based sports. In August, both enthusiasts and professionals will come out to play during the annual Three Rivers Regatta, which will be held from Aug. 4-6.

Red Bull Flugtag

The festival's main event will be the Red Bull Flugtag, a unique and unpredictable event that would make the Wright brothers gasp. Every year, the brave competitors of Flugtag, which means "flying day" in German, have a chance to rewrite aviation history as their staggering variety of aircraft take off from the 22-foot-high "flight deck." Distance traveled, creativity of the craft and showmanship make up the criteria for Flugtag teams, with each event attracting up to 300,000 spectators.

Take the Duquesne Incline for a picturesque tour of the Pittsburgh skyline and great views at the top. DUQUESNE INCLINE

The concepts are left of center at Flugtag, to say the least. In recent years, aviators have created flying tacos, pterodactyls and even Winnebagos with wings. Relatively conventional aircraft, such as Snoopy and his pals, have graced the skies as well.

Showmanship counts. Participants often sport outrageous costumes, create their own skits and make their own soundtracks.

Will the current world record of 258 feet set in 2013 in Long Beach, California, be eclipsed? Be in Pittsburgh on Aug. 5 to find out, when more than 40 teams will seek their fortunes in the sky — or meet a watery end.

Three Rivers Regatta

There is more to the weekendlong water festival than these gravity-defying daredevils. This year marks the 40th anniversary of the Three Rivers Regatta, with tons of powerboats providing plenty of high-speed action to spectators along Point State Park along with jet ski stunt shows, a music festival and a floating parade of lights after dusk.

When you're hungry, walk a short distance to Roberto Clemente Bridge, where an array of food trucks awaits with everything from Pittsburgh's signature pierogies to pizza. There will also be a marketplace and, to continue with the theme of hitting the heights, you can take a ride on the Wheel of Lights, a giant gondola Ferris wheel.

Sightseeing from above

The best way to experience Pittsburgh is also from the sky, though not by Flugtag. Head to the top of the city courtesy of its two funiculars. Board the Duquesne Incline for a spectacular view of the city's three rivers and more as the car clicks upward from Pittsburgh's Southside neighborhood. After peaking at 800 feet, step out and gaze at the stunning gateway to the city's Golden Triangle (more commonly known as the heart of Downtown Pittsburgh).

Back on the ground

If you would like to experience flight from another perspective, check out The National Aviary. The nation's only indoor nonprofit zoo is home to more than 500 birds, 150 of which are threatened or endangered. Don't miss the striking hyacinth macaw and the green-backed trogon, and of course the playful African penguins. Make some new friends in the lorikeet exhibit by purchasing a cup of nectar.

The tech-minded kids (and adults!) hang out at the Carnegie Science Center. The Sportworks side of the facility offers nearly 30 interactive experiences in the categories of LifeWorks, Physics of Sports and Sports Challenge. Scale a 25-foot rock climbing wall, or don some serious climbing gear and hit the 21-foot zero gravity wall. If you love a thrill ride, hang on as you ride the simulated roller coasters.

Celtics should shop the No. 1 pick

Now we know. The Boston Celtics will have the No. 1 overall pick in this year's NBA Draft.

It's a result of the trade with Brooklyn that keeps on giving. Last year, it was Jaylen Brown at No. 3 overall. This year, it will be the top pick in the draft. And in 2018, who knows, it could very well be the No. 1 overall pick once again, depending on what the Nets are able to do this offseason.

Make no mistake about it, the tough decision that president of basketball operations Danny Ainge has to now make is a great problem to have. Don't give me this idea that the Celtics were hoping to get screwed at Tuesday night's lottery just because they didn't want to feel obligated to draft

DANNY PICARD

OPINION

"The Danny Picard Show" airs every weekday at DannyPicard.com. Danny can also be heard on WEEI 93.7 FM. @dannypicard 19-year-old point guard Markelle Fultz with the top pick. That's foolish.

You want the No. 1 overall pick. If not to have first choice of the best available player, then to make sure your pick has as much trade value as possible.

Which gets us back to the decision Ainge will have to make before the draft on June 22: Make the pick, or trade the pick?

Now that we know it's No. 1 overall, here's what I want the Celtics to do: Shop the pick.

I'm not saying they should panic and pull the trigger on the first good trade offer that comes their way. But they should definitely play the game while they can. And by that I mean the Celtics should absolutely let it be known that No. 1 overall is available for the right price. Pick up the phone, listen to offers, make counteroffers, and send outrageous proposals to teams that inquire about players who are probably untouchable.

Again, the Celtics don't need to make any of those trades. But for all those committed to drafting Fultz, dangling that pick and gauging its value on the trade market should give everyone a pretty good sense as to just how good the kid is.

Given the way the Celtics are already contending in the East, how could you just hang up the phone on conversations about proven NBA stars, if they became available in a potential trade? You'd be nuts to ignore that and automatically commit to Fultz right away.

The Celtics obviously have the ability to sweeten any deal that would include this year's No. 1 overall pick. They could add a roster player or two. They could even add next year's Brooklyn pick. And given how bad the Nets will probably be

23.2

MARKELLE FULTZ' PPG
AVERAGE AS A FRESH-MAN AT WASHINGTON

next season, I don't see how that wouldn't be considered an extremely valuable trade chip.

Right now, the Celtics have options. Keeping the pick and drafting Fultz would probably force the team to consider trading Isaiah Thomas. Not because they'd want to, but because Thomas might not want to stick around with an organization that's committing to the kids, especially one at his point guard position, rather than acquire NBA-ready talent to make a serious championship run right now.

Thomas is a free agent after next season. I'd imagine he wouldn't be too pleased if Ainge drafted Fultz. And as much as I'd like Thomas to get a big-money extension and stay in Boston, I can understand moving him if you draft Fultz.

But I don't want to trade Thomas. I want to win now. And if the right player was available in a trade that would help you do that, then I'm all in on moving the pick.

BRADY HAD CONCUSSION LAST SEASON?

Can't imagine Roger Goodell would have the balls to fine or take draft picks away from the Patriots for this after the Deflate-gate mess, but then again – he's Roger Goodell.

Gisele Bündchen, in an interview with "CBS This Morning," said this week that her husband, Tom Brady, suffered a concussion last season and that he "has concussions pretty much every ...." before trailing off. The NFL requires that "significant or noteworthy" injuries be reported and there were no reports of Brady suffering a concussion last season.

"I don't really think it's a healthy thing for a body to go through that kind of aggression all the time," she said. "That could not be healthy for you."

TMZ reported that the NFLPA is looking into the matter.

BALDING 'BRON

Can Markelle Fultz just become a member of the Celtics right now?

The Celtics and LeBron James' Cleveland Cavaliers began the 2017 Eastern Conference Finals Wednesday at TD Garden in Boston, less than 24 hours after the C's landed the No. 1 overall pick in the 2017 NBA Draft. The consensus "best player" in the draft is Fultz, the Washington point guard.

Endearing him to Celtics fans was an old video that resurfaced Wednesday – with Fultz making fun of LeBron and his balding head. Fultz looks like a rather unassuming young man in current photos, but in the 2013 clip, the kid sounds like a young Chris Rock.

Here's what Fultz was saying to LeBron in the vid.

"Man, shut up LeBron! Can't even see your hairline, fool! You goin' bald in the next 24 hours. The next game you gonna be bald! Shut up!"

Ripping on LeBron is a time-tested passion in Boston, so it may be a perfect fit.

Sox an average bunch so far in 2017

The Red Sox have been unable to put together a significant win streak so far. MATT BURKE

We're almost 40 games into the 2017 MLB season and the Red Sox are decidedly average.

The overwhelming favorite in the AL East to start the year, the Sox are looking up at the Yankees - of all teams - and the Orioles in the division standings. The lowly Rays aren't all that far behind them.

There's obviously still an enormous amount of baseball left to be played, but if the Sox do finish stuck in the middle - it will be a much different script than we've seen in the past five years. Since 2012, the Sox have either finished dead last or first in the division.

The Sox went 13-11 in the month of April this year and are 7-7 so far in May. The pitching has been relatively strong. The offense has been relatively weak. But expect that to flip soon. The Sox' pitching is not as good as its shown - top to bottom - so far, and the Sox' lineup is not as bad as it's shown so far.

Xander Bogaerts has been one of the few true bright spots for the Red Sox in 2017. GETTY IMAGES

We have seen small signs of change lately - particularly in the order. Mookie Betts has been reinvigorated since returning to the leadoff spot and was named American League Player of the Week last week. He hit .375 and drove in 11 runs during the seven day period and has continued his hot streak this week. He drove in a pair of runs Wednesday in the Sox' 6-3 victory over the Cardinals in St. Louis. Also driving in runs in that one was Christian Vazquez, who is hitting .345 this season, and Dustin Pedroia, who has a .285 average on the year. Jackie Bradley Jr. also had an RBI in the victory, but he has been wholly disappointing at the plate this year - owning a .200 batting average.

On tap

The Sox will begin a four-game series with the A's in Oakland on Thursday before returning home to face the Rangers for three games at Fenway starting next Tuesday. Oakland is arguably the worst team in the American League right now as it owns a record of 17-22 and has a run differential of minus-41.

Hector Velazquez, a 28-year-old righty, got the call to come up from Pawtucket to start Thursday's series opener against the A's.

Chris Sale (4-2, 2.15 ERA) will look to continue his torrid pace on Friday at Bobby Valentine's favorite venue - the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum. Drew Pomeranz (3-3, 5.29 ERA) is expected to get the ball Saturday and Eduardo Rodriguez (2-1, 3.05 ERA) is slated to throw for the Sox on Sunday.
